AUTHOR GUIDELINES

Tashkent, February 28, 2023

STARS Scientific Journal editorial board accepts articles of no more than 24 pages (in Times New Roman font, 14pt size, 1.5 line spacing); page parameters: top/bottom margins 2 cm, left 1.5 cm, right 3 cm), i.e. no more than 40,000 characters (with spaces). Articles are accepted only in electronic form. The article file must be in *.doc or *.docx format.

The editorial board does not accept
- articles published or accepted for consideration in other publications;
- articles that don't meet the requirements listed below.

I. Requirements for the design of articles

1.1. The article should have the following structure:
1. Information about the article should be available in 3 languages: Uzbek (Latin), English and Russian.
2. Article text
3. List of literature

1.1.1 Information about the article

Before the main text of the article, specify:
- Information about the author/authors (authors-in a new paragraph): first and last name (as in the passport); academic degree, academic title; position and place of work (full official name of the organization); city and country (if this is not clear from the name of the organization); contact e-mail (to be published in the journal). If the article is written by a group of authors, specify first author's email address for contacts; ORCID ID (recommended).
- title of the article.
- abstract (at least 1000 no more than 1200 characters with spaces; the abstract should reflect the summary of the article: goals and objectives, research methods, a brief conclusion);
- keywords (key phrases should not be long).

1.1.2 Article text

The main text. Red paragraph lines should only be indented with paragraph margins (not spaces or tabs). The necessary semantic selections should be made in bold and italics, but not in color (it will be "lost" during layout). Do not create frames (frames with text), because after deleting frames, the text contained in them can go to another place in the article. Footnotes should be paginated (located at the bottom of the page, not at the end of the article) and made using standard Word tools (Insert-link-footnote).

Tables should be executed in Word table cells. Make sure that each item in the table corresponds to its own cell (do not use paragraph symbols for semantic breakdown of rows). Alignment of text and numbers within cells should only be performed using standard methods, and not using spaces, paragraphs, or additional blank lines. Do not use color selection in the table if it does not carry a semantic load.

Graphics and illustrative materials. To create graphs and charts, it is best to use Excel. If possible, avoid building graphs in Word, as they require a lot of extra work to prepare for layout. Drawings and diagrams that are still made in Word should be grouped within a single object, otherwise the elements may shift at the slightest shift of the page borders, which is inevitable when working with a document. It is not recommended to use graphic materials scanned or taken from the Internet in the article and do not insert them into Word documents. The quality of such materials is usually not suitable for printing.

1.1.3 References

Link to the list of references in the text of the article

- the author's last name, year of publication, and specific pages that you link to (if necessary) are shown in parentheses: as noted by K. Freeman (Freeman1987, p. 120);
- if there are two authors, both surnames are indicated; if there are more than two, the surname of the first author is "et al." (for foreign sources, "et al."). If you refer to multiple sources at once, then separate them with a semicolon: (Obstfeld, and Rogoff, 1995, p. 631; Borisova et al., 2012; Radcliffe et al., 1984);
- when several works of the same author are mentioned, the years of publication are listed after the surname, separated by commas: (OECD, 1996, 2005).

The list of references is indicated at the end of the article (after the main text).

- the list includes only publications that are mentioned in the text of the article. The list is compiled in alphabetical order — first publications in the main language of writing the article, then foreign sources.
- each source must have an author. If an edited collection is mentioned, then the editor (the first of the editors) is indicated as the author. If the work is performed by the organization's team and specific authors are not specified, the organization is indicated as the author: Polterovich V. (ed.) (2010). Strategiya modernizatsii rossiiskoi ekonomiki: [Strategy of modernization of the Russian economy]. St. Petersburg: Aletheia. (In Russian).; WEF (2014). Global competitiveness report 2014—2015. Geneva: World Economic Forum.
- if there are several publications of the same author in one year, then the Latin letters a, b, c, and so on are added to the year.
- always include DOIs, if any (as a link). Don't put a dot at the end of a DOI link, just like any other Internet link.

The list of references does not include: regulatory documents, statistics, collections, archival materials, newspaper notes without the author's name, links to websites without specifying specific material. References to such sources are given in footnotes. It is not allowed to specify suspicious sites as sources (for example referat.ru), tabloid press sites, forums, and social networks.

II. PREPARING ARTICLES

To submit an article, authors must confirm the following points. The article can be returned to the authors if it does not correspond to them.

1. This article has not been published before, nor has it been submitted for review or publication in another journal.
2. The file of the submitted article is presented in Microsoft Word format.
3. Full Internet addresses (URLs) are provided for links where possible.
4. The text is typed with a line spacing of 1.5; the font size of 14 points is used; italics are used for highlighting, not underscores (except for Internet addresses); all illustrations, graphs and tables are located in the appropriate places in the text, and not at the end of the document.
5. The text meets the stylistic and bibliographic requirements described above. The annotation should contain at least 1000 and no more than 1200 characters (with spaces).
6. The main file of the article does not contain any references to the authorship of the article.

III. COPYRIGHTS

Authors who publish in this journal "STARS International University" grant the popular science journal "STARS International University" an exclusive license to publish, distribute or block access to articles (including any derivative products, in all languages) and sublicense such rights, including for commercial purposes.

IV. PRIVACY

The names and email addresses entered on the website of this journal will be used exclusively for the purposes indicated by this journal and will not be used for any other purpose or provided to other persons and organizations.
